Foreword to the third issue of peer reviewed scientific
Journal of Security and Sustainability Issues
The General Jonas Žemaitis Military Academy of Lithuania

I am glad to introduce the third issue of the “Journal of Security and Sustainability Issues” to peers, colleagues, doctoral students, practitioners and other readers of all walks of life, who are not indifferent to the future of our societies and care of the threats and difficulties, which emerge in the uneven path of our countries’ development.

It is important to note that the “Journal of Security and Sustainability Issues” was met with interest and, it seems, despite comparatively young age already established itself as a discussion hub, where concerns and opinions are shared and discussed. The journal, which warns about the hidden costs of development, reminds us about a variety of threats, which has to be indicated, and, if so, prevented. It also appears to be a valuable input into the family of journals elaborating a wide range of development issues.

I express personal support to the diverse partnerships of the journal, which embrace academia, government and practitioners. Hence, not only topicality but internationalism and science-government-practice collaboration in evaluating current processes, predicting threats and suggesting the ways of better control provide us additional tool for better development of the secure and sustainable future.

With warmest regards,

Prof. Dr. Sc. Eng. EDVINS KARNITIS
Leading Researcher, University of Latvia
Member of Advisory Board, Riga Technical University
Expert, Subcommittee of Saeima on Monitoring the Drafting and Implementation of the National Development Plan
Adviser to the Chairman, Public Utilities Commission of Latvia